I've never backed those military LARP tyrants who took an oath to their pension and do everything they can to keep their special class of citizen.

In my 50 plus years, I do not recall the police ever factually being for protecting the citizens and serving the citizens. Maybe I grew up under a bad cop town, but it has been like this for at least 50 years.

Hard to believe that people lived this long under them, watching them abuse others, and because they themselves were not on the receiving end of the abuse, continues to support them.

The support that I could not believe.

Police officer in Georgia chasing down a man to shoot him in the back. Took weeks to get people to back off supporting this man.

Rushing into a situation where a teen kid had a bb or pellet gun at the park, skidding to a stop very close. Jumping out of the car and gunning the kid down. No investigation what-so-ever, just rush in and gun down. The kid did not put them in danger, they put themselves into a situation that allowed them to falsely claim they felt danger.

That lady from Australia that called the cops, and was murdered in cold blood. Some people still support those cops, but it took weeks to get many people to realize that was wrong.

The guy in Boston I think it was, the police arrested him, hand cuffed him, threw him in the back of a police van, and then commenced to drive in a way that he was thrown around the back of the vehicle until his head was damaged to the point he died. Plenty of people still seem to support those cops.

The guy in Vegas who was a pest control person who had a pellet gun in his room. They had him on the ground crawling with several cops there, and when his pants fell down and he went to pull them up, they shot him. Seriously?

The number of blatantly unreasonable killings of people by cops is far too high. 1 single instance of it with the cops not being put in jail is too many, but we have dozens of not hundreds of these events happening.

I support individual cops, as they show themselves worthy. But as an institution, I have never once carte blanche defended the police. I was abused by the town cop for 10 years before I moved away, and when he located where I was after my service in the marines was over, he had the new town I lived in cops abuse me.

I grew up in a smaller town and remember cops helping people with car problems and food drives and they used to hang out at footballs games and be well liked.

My last interaction with a cop was on new years eve, I was pumping gas and a cop was on the pump next to me so I stepped beside the pump and asked him where the nearest firework stand was. The first thing he did was put his hand in his pistol and tell me to step back.

Must be nice, my town was under 1000 residents. I saw cops help some others, but me, I was just their target.

The Chief hired the local lunatic MHI in and out resident to frame me for something the MHI kid did. He showed up to an eagle scout meeting in a trench coat and a shot gun underneath. Later that night our backroom window was blown out with a shot gun.

My father died when I was 7 due to medical malpractice, by the time I was 18 every single penny that was in savings from the suit had been burned fighting false charges from the police. Poor family, no college fund, straight A student.

The police as an institution sucks. Not that I have not met OK ones. Never one that ever helped me, the best I can say for some is that they either gave me a verbal warning for speeding or a written warning for speeding.

You know those opportunity zones that have nothing there but streets and fire hydrants and maybe a sidewalk? I drove all the way across the nation from Philly to Sand Diego, I was almost there when I was just too tired to go on, it was straight through, so I stopped at one of those places. Not a building around, just to get an hour or two of sleep. Fuck no, police has to come around and kick me out.

Before that I was driving through Dallas, which is where I joined the Marines, got pulled over following the speed of traffic in the middle lane. I had Iowa plates, but still had my Dallas drivers license, he rode me the riot act like I was the worst human in the world, until he saw my military I.D. and my Texas Driver's license and I ended up leaving with a verbal warning.

Of course, before that, I was just nearing Ohio driving 5 miles over the speed limit with people actually honking their horns at me for being too slow. Got pulled over for that too, I was probably the slowest car on the road, but apparently the only out of state plate there to steal from. After she asked where I was going and realized I was a Marine she let me go with a written warning.

So far that is about as useful as cops have ever been for me.

They had to see it play out in Salem, OR last night. The cops were coming at them and no one was burning down buildings or looting. The politicians were just getting scared and ordered their SS squads to put it down. They declared it an "unlawful assembly" when it wasn't.

It's been long overdue from Veterans and active military. I can tell you (and have) that we were targeted by Norfolk PD during the years I served in the Navy. I heard similar tales from Marines who were embarked during "Med Cruises" (my ship was an "amphib") that the situation around Camp Lejeune was similar. There are good cops, but the majority are pieces of shit.

Indication that the CCP owns Telegram? I've seen none and I care much. Last I knew, the creator was doing a valiant effort to resist Russian censorship.

That being said, I advise avoiding creating a Telegram account because they require a mobile telephone number.

Communist Local Police Officers and Administrators Physically Attack The United States Proud Boys in the street.

"We were there to stop terrorist, and the police hit us with batons, fists and pepper balls. At one point the commie cops placed two armed BLACK BLM terrorist in front of the United States Proud Boys to try to get them to attack, when they did not, the police in return removed the Stage Joggers and attacked these American Patriots. It's all on video."

Keep in mind police departments are largely autonomous from one another. By all means, if they decide to suppress the patriots that are out there fighting to keep them funded and the assassins off their backs, then they must be dealt with accordingly.

But until a department exposes itself to be against us, remember that a large portion of them are on our side, fighting tooth and nail to maintain their communities.
